MSc International Human Resource Management / Development

Location: Birmingham

Tuition Fees: £12,000

Requirement: IELTS 6.5

Start: September, January

Scholarship: £300

Course content

Turn one: In term one you will cover four modules – HRM in context; Leading, managing and developing people; Learning and development and the Developing skills module. As well as development these modules provide a generalist view of HR and the contexts in which it operates as well as specific skills to help you manage and develop people. Strategic aspects of HR will be covered in the Leading managing and developing people module.

- HRM in context
- Leading, managing and developing people
- Learning and development
- Developing Skills for Business Leadership

Term two: Term two includes the International Personnel and Development module to develop your specific HR knowledge and techniques in an international context. Other modules include Resourcing and talent management, Managing employment relations and a choice between Reward management or Employment law.

- International Personnel and Development
- Resourcing and talent management
- Managing employment relations
- Choose between Employment Law or Reward Management.
- Employment Law or Reward Management

Term three: The remainder of your time on the course is devoted to doing your business report or an individual dissertation. You will be taught how to carry out the applied research through the research methods module before undertaking your work-based project which requires you to research a 'live' HR issue within an organisation. If you don't obtain a placement, and/or are unable to undertake a business report, you'll have the chance to complete a dissertation. In this case you will graduate with an alternative title of award (MSc International Human Resourcing), which does not have CIPD accreditation.

- Business Report (for CIPD accredited membership) or an individual Dissertation
