Requirement: IELTS 6.5

Scholarship: £2,000

What you'll study

LLM International Trade and Commercial Law offers a significant opportunity to develop a high level appreciation of one of the fastest growing areas of law. Trade between nations is of huge importance to national and regional economies as well as having huge global significance.

The modules offered on this course offer the opportunity to develop expertise in each of the key areas impacting international trade law. The course explores diverse areas of the subject including international sales and carriage of goods, insurance, international finance, international dispute resolution and World Trade Organisation (WTO) Law. The latter is of particular importance since India and China joined the WTO.

Course modules

- International Competition Law
- International Trade Risk Insurance
- International Carriage of Goods
- International Commercial Transactions
- International Sale of Goods
- Private International Law
- World Trade Organisation

An introduction to International Economic Law through an examination of the institutions and substantive law of the World Trade Organisation (WTO). The Dispute Settlement System is central to the WTO and this module examines selected Covered Agreements through textual analysis and dispute reports.

Or you may take up to two modules from another subject area, excluding Oil, Gas and Mining Law.

You will start your dissertation after completing these modules.

Please note modules run subject to sufficient student numbers.

LLM Oil, Gas Mining Law

Location: Nottingham

Start: September

Duration: 1 / 2 years

Tuition Fees: £13,400 (1 year), £14,780 (2 years)

Requirement: IELTS 6.5

Scholarship: £2,000

What you'll study

This course will provide you with a strong analytical understanding of the key legal issues in the area, with a particular focus on the Environmental Law and Investment Law aspects of the oil, gas and mining industries. It also draws on our strengths in International Trade and Commercial Law, which will help you gain an appreciation of the oil, gas and mining industries in their global economic context.

Course modules: You will study six taught modules followed by a dissertation.

- Oil, Gas and Mining Investment Law I
- Oil, Gas and Mining Investment Law II

These core modules introduce you to the political and economic background within the petroleum and mining industry, as well as other major energy infrastructure projects. You will explore the international legal framework for transnational foreign investment and the general policy and legal issues related to the international regulation of such investment. You will begin by developing your understanding of the economic, political and legal relationship between States, public and private international finance institutions, and multinational energy and mining corporations. The second module moves on to discuss both regulatory and litigation aspects of investment disputes within the petroleum, mining and other energy infrastructure projects using examples drawn from across the world.

- Oil, Gas, Mining and Environmental Law I
- Oil, Gas, Mining and Environmental Law II

These modules focus on international environmental law developments that directly relate to the regulation of both private and state-owned energy, petroleum and mining companies. You will trace the environmental impacts of each formative stage of the energy, petroleum and mining industries: in particular introducing the contextual, underpinning frameworks in which these industries operate.

You will begin by studying the international law principles surrounding the petroleum and mining industries. The second module moves on to consider the legal aspects of development of industrial installations, in particular as they relate to jurisdictional and environmental impact issues. You will also choose two modules from other subject areas. We strongly advise you to take modules from our International Trade and Commercial Law options, which are highly applicable to the oil, gas and mining industries.

On completion of the taught modules you will begin work on your dissertation. The dissertation is an extended piece of academic work, independently researched and written. You will be supported in your work by one-to-one supervision from a tutor expert in the chosen field. Subject to academic suitability and the availability of an appropriately expert tutor, you may select your own area of study for the dissertation phase of the course.

LLM Sports Law

Location: Nottingham

Start: September

Duration: 1 / 2 years

Tuition Fees: £13,400 (1 year), £14,780 (2 years)

Requirement: IELTS 6.5

Scholarship: £2,000

What you'll study

Course modules: You will study six taught modules followed by a dissertation.

- European Sports Law and Policy
- Sport, Intellectual Property and Commerce
- Sport, Law and Regulation
- Sport, Law and the Human Body

This module aims to support students to critically appreciate human body issues arising in the course of participation in sport and how successfully or otherwise these issues are addressed through the making, interpretation and enforcement of sporting and legal rules. The module starts by focusing on the bodily interests of participants and explores the duties to protect these that are placed on other participants and those with special responsibilities (such as coaches, organisers, officials, governing bodies). The middle section critically examines inclusion and exclusion of participation, particularly as they relate to such issues as gender, race and disability. The final section considers drugs and doping. The module draws very extensively on comparative and international content.

You can also select up to two modules from another subject area, excluding Oil, Gas and Mining Law.

On completion of the taught modules you will begin work on your dissertation. The dissertation is an extended piece of academic work, independently researched and written. You will be supported in your work by one-to-one supervision from a tutor expert in the chosen field. Subject to academic suitability and the availability of an appropriately expert tutor, you may select your own area of study for the dissertation phase of the course.

Please note modules run subject to sufficient student numbers.

LLM Health Law and Ethics

Location: Nottingham

Start: September

Duration: 1 / 2 years

Tuition Fees: £13,400 (1 year), £14,780 (2 years)

Requirement: IELTS 6.5

Scholarship: £2,000

What you'll study

LLM Health Law and Ethics will involve you in the study of key issues relating to legal principles applied in the context of health and medicine. You will be supported in gaining high-level understanding of the organisational, regulatory and legal structures underpinning medical and health practice. Based on these fundamentals you will have the opportunity to develop critical insights into a range of specialist areas in the field. In particular as the law relates to medical innovation, consent, mental health, beginning and ending of life issues and the use of human tissue.

The course incorporates a strong emphasis on ethics based critiques of legal approaches to health and medicine. Similarly you will be supported in developing a sophisticated international perspective on the issues in particular through the lens of human rights approaches.

Course modules: You will study six taught modules followed by a dissertation.

Choose from:

- The Legal Structure of Health Law: Judicial Review, Confidentiality and Malpractice
- Intellectual Property, Public Health and Medical Innovation

- Consent, Capacity and Mental Health
- Mental Capacity and Mental Health Law
- The Employer and Health Law
- Law and the Beginning and Ending of Life
- Medical Use of the Human Body

Or select up to two modules from another subject area, excluding Oil, Gas and Mining Law.

You will start your dissertation after completing these modules.

The dissertation is an extended piece of academic work, independently researched and written. You will be supported in your work by one-to-one supervision from a tutor expert in the chosen field. Subject to academic suitability and the availability of an appropriately expert tutor, you may select your own area of study for the dissertation phase of the course.
